Background

Common Store Co is an umbrella of several creatives brand. The brands are developed and curated to invoke feelings and reminisce about personal memories in everyday goods.

Currently, the brand identity hasn't proven to be like that. By this statement, the brand itself needed a revamp both in identity and their website.

Role & Responsibility

My role in this project as a Web Designer responsible for end-to-end UX and UI Designs, collaborating with Graphic Designer, Creative Director, and Developer. My deliverable Includes:

1. Analyze the current website and look for improvements.
2. Create a more flowy content structure
3. Collect moodboards as references
4. Create a wireframe and sketches
5. Create UI Design and Iterate

Findings

In the current design, we found that it does not reflect the brand value. Here's more that we found:

1. Plain design that didn't reflect a creative brand
2. The website looked like a list of brands
3. As a company profile, there are no values to present
4. There weren't any of the things that were memorable to look at.

Design Decisions

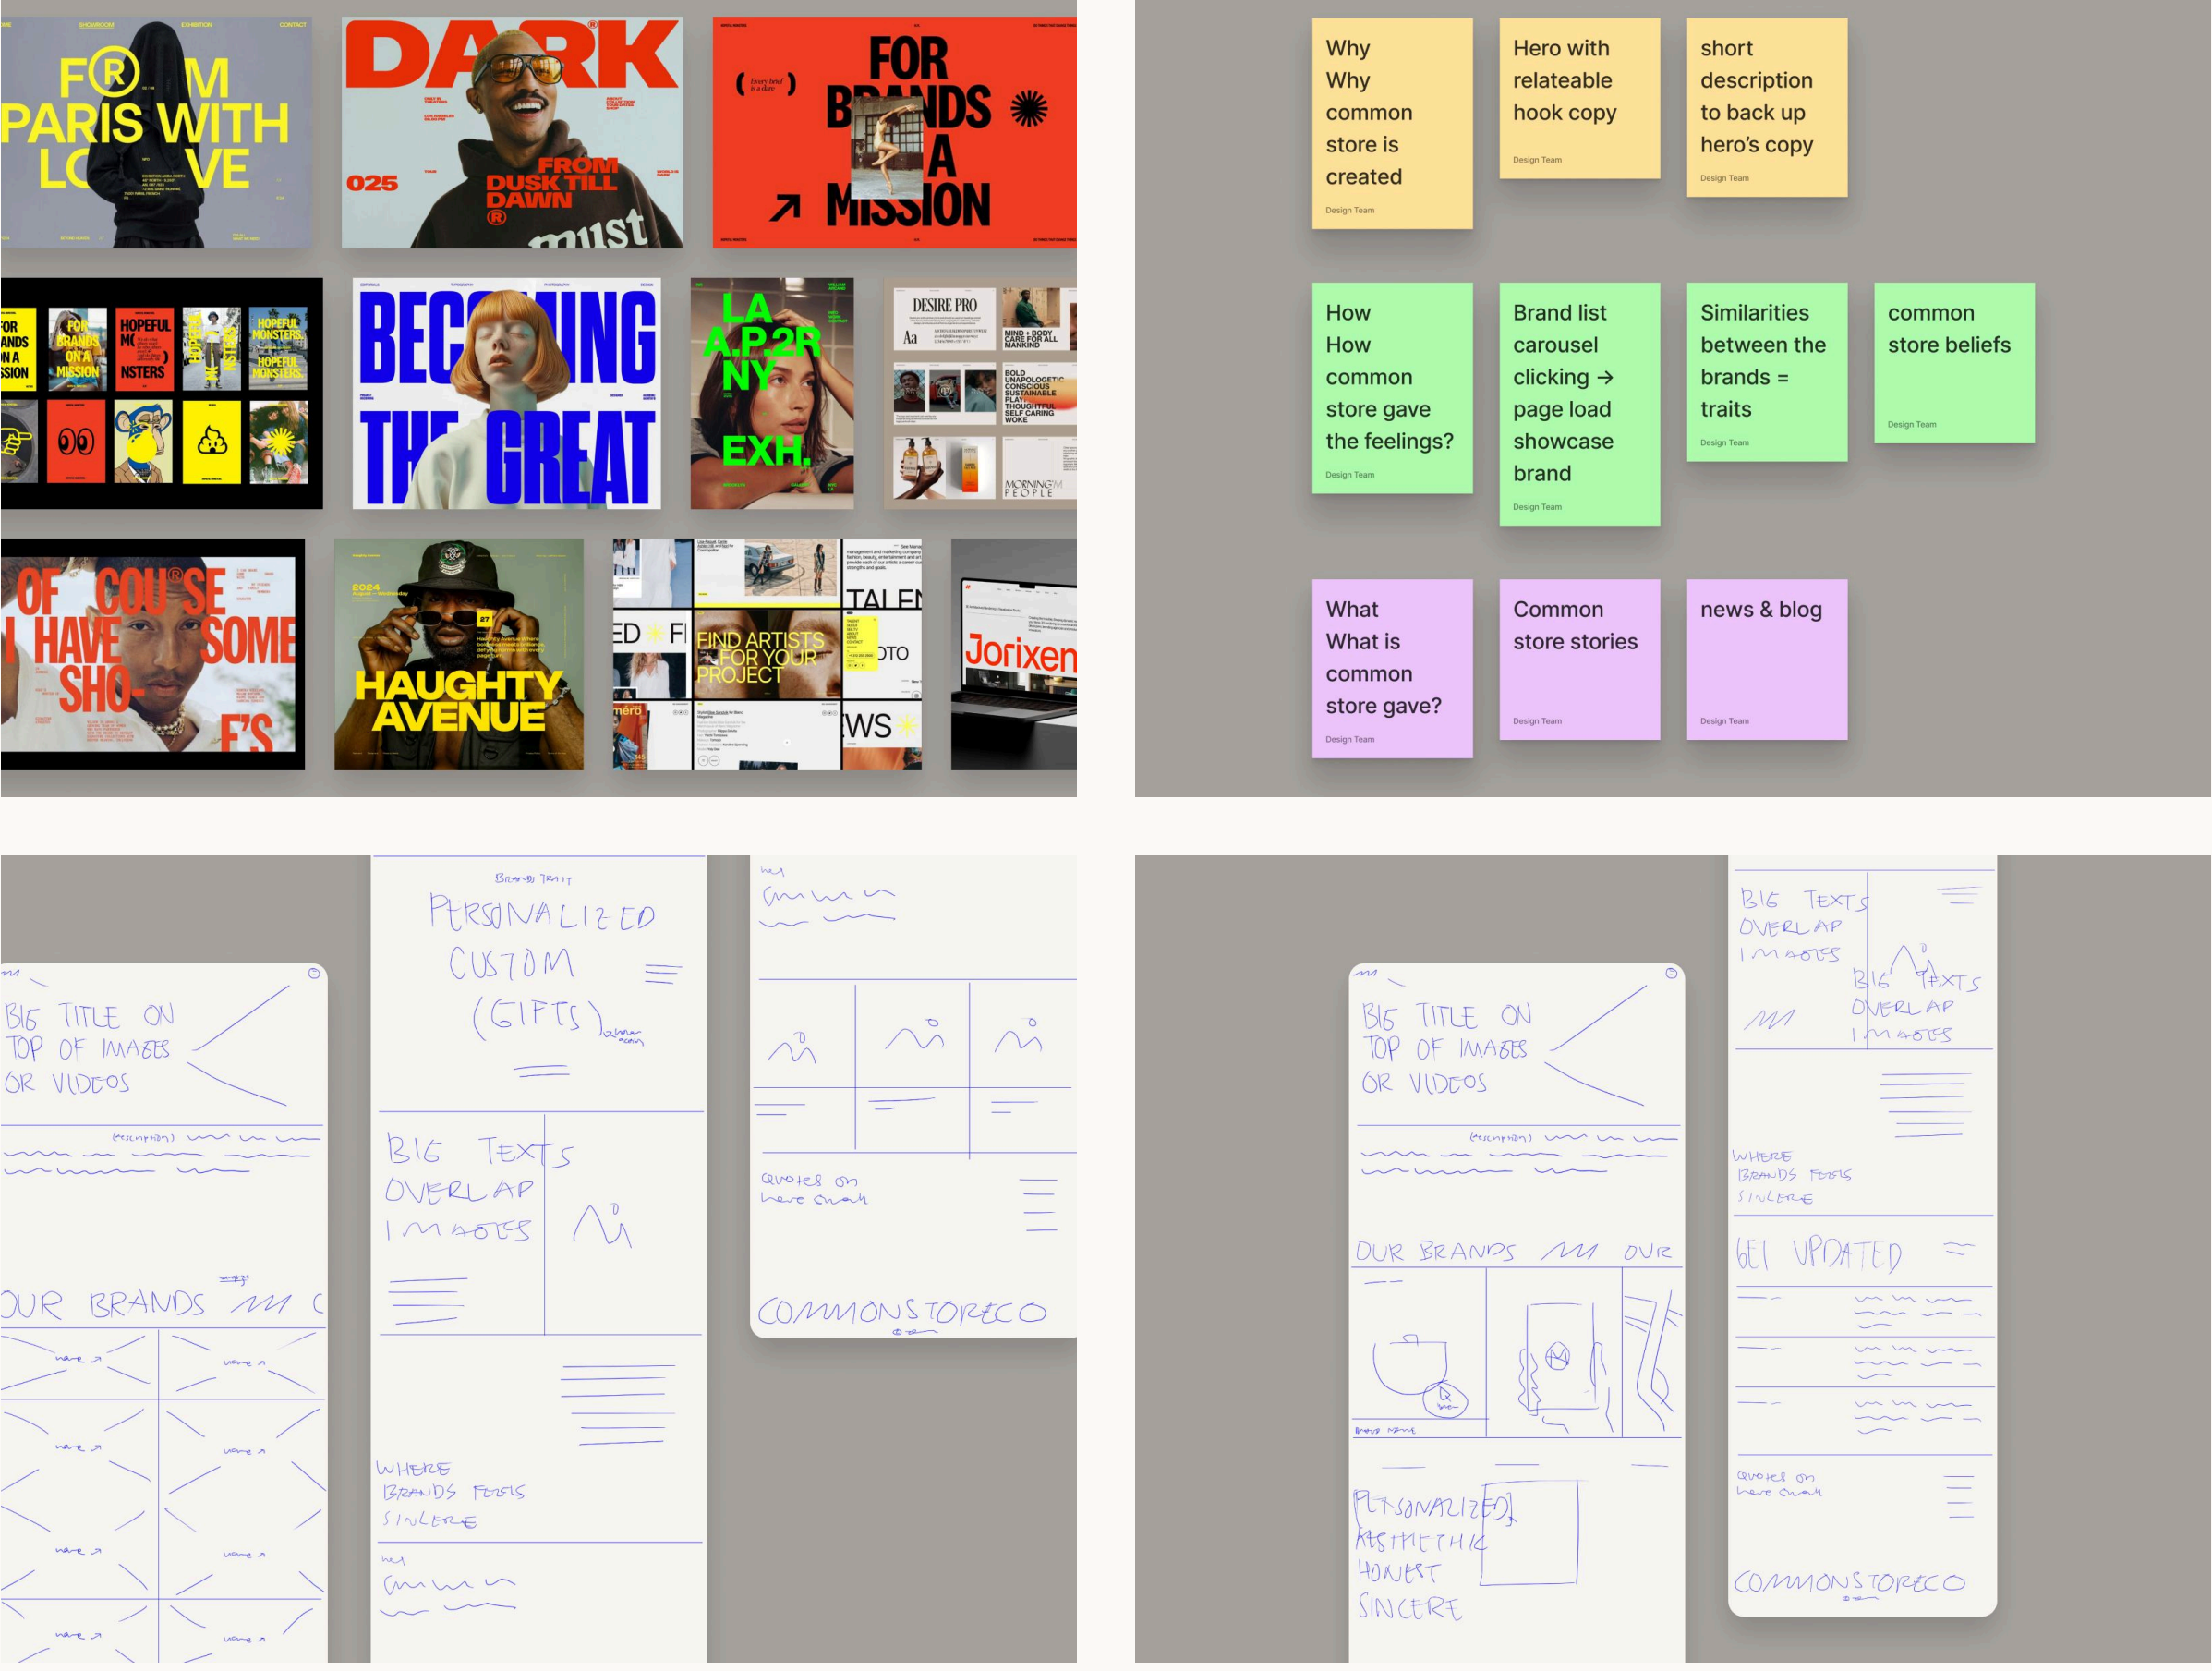

Inject the UI with the new Brand Guideline

The current website design does not reflect the values. We brainstormed together to create the website that feels warmer and more modern.

Restructuring website content

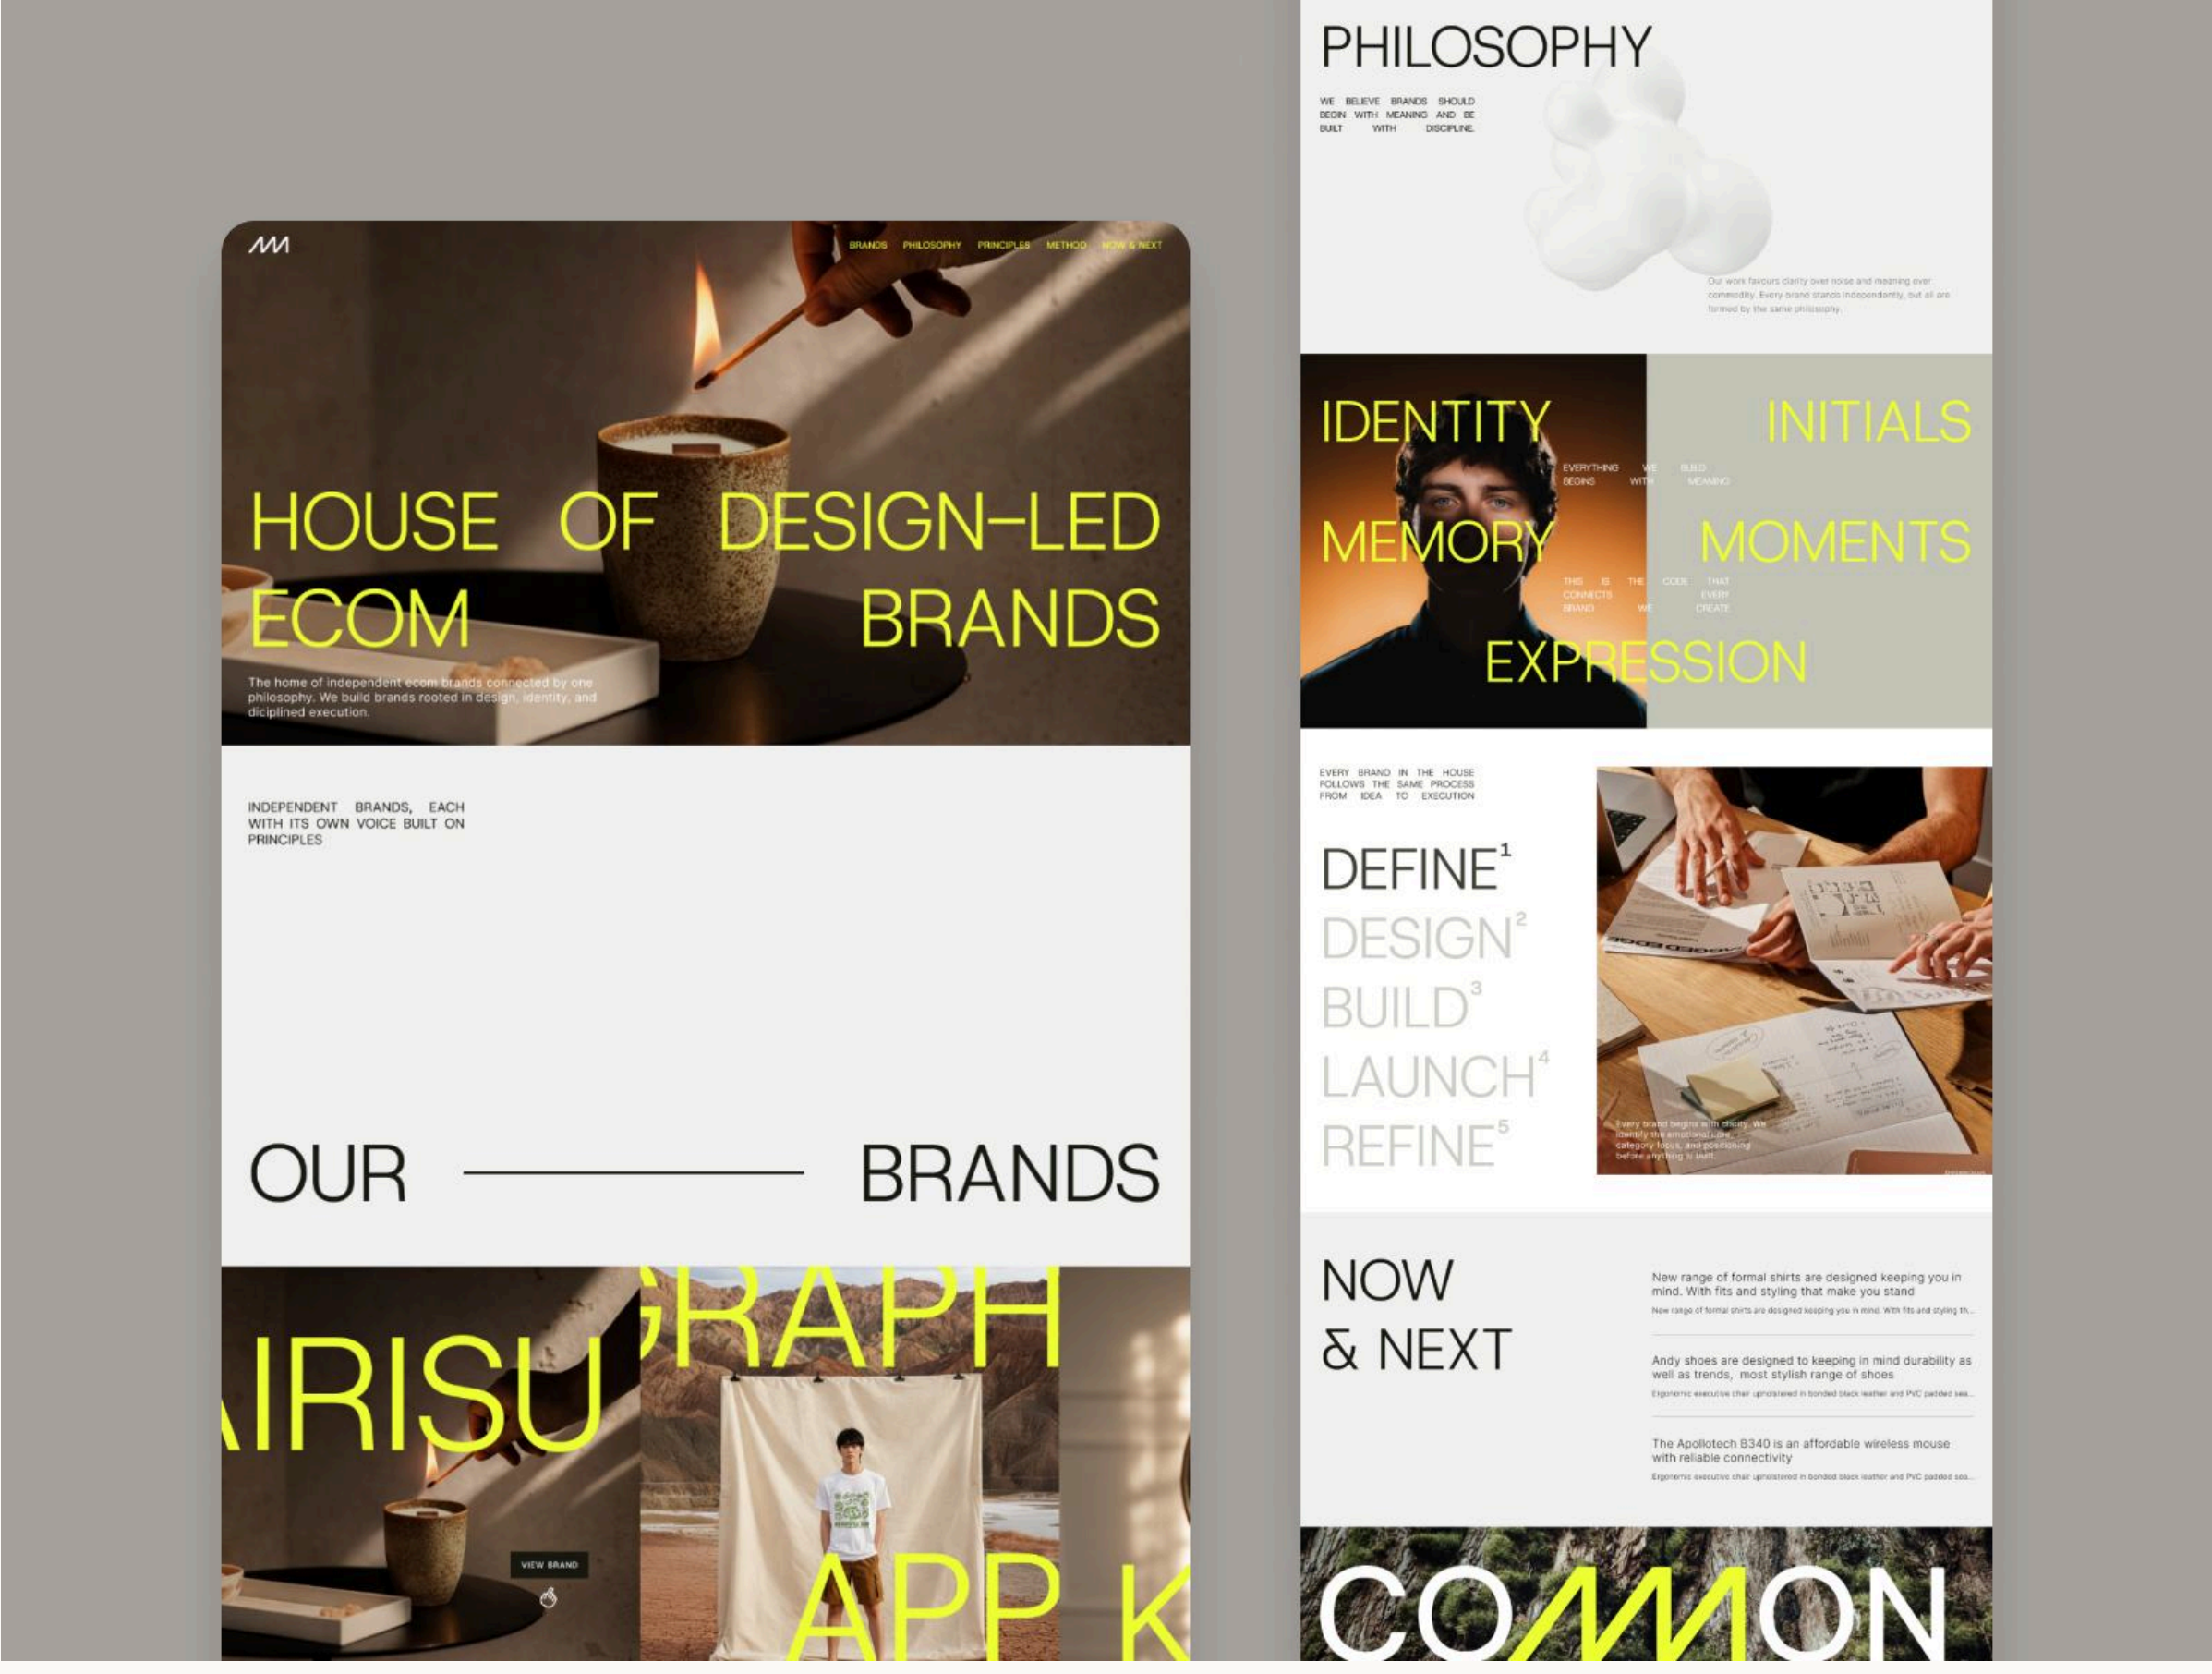

The website only has a hero and a list of brands that takes too long to scroll. People don't just want to see the brands and descriptions; they also want to know more about the values of each brand we have.

We restructured the content to provide more explanation and use the Golden Circle as the framework, so users can better understand what Common Store Co offers.

Outcome

The redesign of Common Store Co has greatly improved visually and has a better content structure. Since this is a hub of brands, it's important to have a great first impression as the foundation.
